WOMAN'S CLUB NOTES

The concert at the club house this evening should bring out a large audience. Not only will a fine program be heard but a good attendance will in some measure be an expression of appreciation to the O. U. Quartet and their accompanist who have generously assisted at nearly every benefit entertainment in Sierra Madre this year. It is a matter of considerable expense to bring the DeNubla orchestra here and their delightful music will add much to the program. The concert is to be given for the joint benefit of the quartet and the club.Mrs. M. A. Pilkington of Memphis, Tenn., has rented the Cameron cottage

Ethel Powell and Etta Dickson, Messrs. Paul Baugh and Edward Pelletier.Mrs. W. E. Farman entertained a number of sixth grade pupils at her home on Tuesday in honor of the birthday anniversary of her daughter, Miss Bae. The afternoon was spent at music and games after which elaborate refreshments were served. The decorations were light blue, the color scheme being carried out wherever possible. Out of town guests were Miss Mabel Waldo of Los Angeles and Miss Anna Stanberry of Mason City,

ed the members of the Monrovia Chapter at a banquet Wednesday evening, followed by a joint meeting of the two chapters. Mrs. Lena W. Stannard, Grand Worthy Matron, was the honored guest of the evening. The delicious banquet served in the auditorium of the club house, the tables being arranged in the form of a star, with a large pink and green floral piece in the center. Initiation ceremonies were afterwards conducted in the chapter hall, the visitors taking the various official stations.

Wet Wash Service

THE ATTENTION of the HOUSE WIVES of Sierra Madre is called to the fact that The Royal Laundry of Pasadena will on Monday, March 25th, begin their WET WASH SERVICE in Sierra Madre. This has been a wonderful success from the day it started in Pasadena.WE call for your laundry and deliver it to you in about 48 hours. We give it a thorough wash and then it is run through an extractor (wringer) and returned to you damp, just about right for immediate ironing of the pieces which are not to be starched. We blue but do not starch. In our wash we use nothing but Proctor & Gamble's Pure Natural Amber Chips, practically the same as Ivory only in chip form for use in large quantities.If we bleach we use our Electric Bleach which is made by charging salt water with electricity, nothing else.WE DO NOT MARK YOUR CLOTHING as every patron's laundry is done entirely separate from every other one.THE PRICE is so cheap that no one can afford to do their own washing any more. It is cheaper than your gas bill alone, to say nothing of your own time and trouble.

Fifty Pieces for Sixty Cents

We allow one spread with every fifty pieces, You can have as many pieces as you wish over fifty at 1 cent each, but the minimum charge will be 60 cents.

SYNOPSIS

In Paris Fitzgerald meets Karl Breitmann, a mysterious adventurer, and sees a beautiful American girl, who interests him. Breitmann dreams of securing 2,000,000 francs.

Ferraud, a French detective and butterfly collector, is shadowing Breitmann for France, whose safety he imperils. Germany is also interested in Breitmann. In New York Fitzgerald meets Cathewe.

Fitzgerald on a wager poses as an Italian vander of plaster statues. A beautiful young woman asks him to call at a house in Dalton. The house is owned by Admiral Killigrew.

The beautiful young woman, Miss Laura Killigrew, asks him to become her father's secretary and clear up a mysterious tapping in the house. The burglar alarm wires have been tampered with.

Breitmann instead of Fitzgerald is engaged as the admiral's secretary. Hunting pirate's treasure is the admiral's hobby. His ancient home had been owned by a French exile.

Laura tells Breitmann about the strange noises in the big chimney of the house. Fitzgerald and Breitmann plan to trap the intruder who is seeking something in the chimney.

Some one has been tampering with Breitmann's trunk. Fitzgerald and Breitmann find loosened brick in the chimney and a chalk diagram.

The admiral partly dismantles the chimney, and Breitmann finds papers describing a treasure hidden in Corsica by soldiers of Napoleon to aid his return to power.

The admiral plans to take his daughter, Fitzgerald, Breitmann and others to Corsica on his yacht. Cathewe and Hildegarde von Mitter are invited.

Ferraud meets the admiral and gets an invitation. Fitzgerald learns that Breitmann has lied to him. Both are in love with Laura.

CHAPTER XIII.

THEY GO A-SAILING.

THE yacht Laura, sleek and swan white, her ensign and colors folding and unfolding, lifting and sinking as the afternoon breeze stirred them, was making ready for sea, and many of the villagers had come down to the water front to see her off.

"Wonder what poor devil of a pirate is going to have his bones turned over this trip?" said the static agent to Mr. Donovan, who, among others on the station platform, watched the drab anchor as it clanked jerkily upward to the bows, leaving a swivel and a boll

GOOD TIDINGS FROM SAN JACINTO

Great Excitement Over New Water Discovery

An immense underground lake of water has been discovered near San Jacinto, California. A mere crust of earth, in some places but a few feet in thickness, has shielded for ages an immense body of water, sufficient to flood the entire country for miles around, which means that this fertile, semi-tropical beauty spot will in short order be the Garden of Eden of the whole state. All these lands are unsurpassed in fertility, productiveness and climatic conditions. All of which is proven by the thousands of acres of beautiful orchards and thrifty ranches under a previous water development. We state, without fear of contradiction, that this neighborhood contains a greater number of on the waters which had released it so grudgingly.

"I guess it ain't goin' t' be any ol' pirate this time," replied Mr. Donovan with a pleasurable squeeze of the pocketbook over his head.

"Hi! There she goes! Good luck!" cried the station agent, swinging his hat with gusto.

The voyagers were gathered about the stern rail, and a handkerchief or two fluttered in the wind. For an hour they tarried there, keeping in view the green wooded hills and the white cottages nestling at their base. And turn by turn there were glimpses of the noble old house at the top of the hill. And some looked upon it for the last time.

"I've had a jolly time up there," said Fitzgerald. The gulls swooped as they crossed and recrossed the milky wake. "Better time than I deserved."

"Are you still worried about that adventure?" Laura demanded. "Dismiss it from your mind, and let it be as if we had known each other for many years."

"Do you really mean that?" "To be sure I do," promptly. "But Mrs. Goldfield had given me a guarantee before I addressed you."

There never was a girl quite like this one. He purlined a sidelong glance at her. The rich pigment in the blood mantled her cheeks, and in her eyes there was still a bit of captive sunshine. He knew now that what had been only a possibility was an assured fact. Never before had he cursed his father's friends, but he did so now silently and earnestly, for their pilfering fingers and their plausible lies had robbed his father's son of a fine inheritance. Money. Never had he desired it so keenly. What earthly chance had he? Unconsciously he shrugged.

"You are shrugging!" she cried, noting the expression, for if he was secretly observing her she was surreptitiously contemplating his own advantages.

"Did I shrug?" "You certainly did." "Well," candidly, "it was the thought of money that made me do it."

"I detest it too." "Good heavens, I didn't say I detested it! What I shrugged about was my own dreary lack of it."

"Bachelors do not require much."

"That's true, but I no longer desire to remain a bachelor." The very thing that saved him was the added laughter, forced, miserably forced. Fool! The words had slipped without his thinking.

"GRACIOUS! THAT SOUNDS HORRIBLY LIKE A PROPOSAL."

"Gracious! That sounds horribly like a proposal." She beamed upon him merrily.

And his heart sank, for he had been earnest enough for all his blunder. Manlike, he did not grasp the fact that under the circumstance merriment was all she could offer him if she would save him from his own stupidity.

Then of a sudden the red rim of the sun vanished behind the setting landscape, and all the grim loneliness of the sea rose up to greet them.

"It is lonely. Let us go and prepare for dinner. Look!" pointing to a bright star far down the east. "And Corsica lies that way."

"And also madness!" was his thought.

"Oh, it seems not quite true that we are all going a-venturing as they do in the story books. The others think we are just going to Funchal. Remember, you must not tell. Think of it. A real treasure, every frame of which must tell a story of its own—love, heroism and devotion."

"Beautiful! But there must be a rescuing of princesses and fighting and all that. I choose the part of remaining by the princess."

well kept fruit orchards than any other section of equal size in the whole State of California, and we state further that they will show a much greater percentage of profit. There is no scale or pests to fight, or failures to sadden the heart.

A Committee with autos has been appointed to show everybody around free, and we extend a hearty invitation to all of our good neighbors to see this beautiful little Valley of ours in all its glory. Come over on the Santa Fe in the morning, back in the evening. The San Jacinto Board of Trade, San Jacinto, Cal.

"It is yours." She tilted back her head and breathed and breathed. She knew the love of living.

"Lucky we are all good sailors," he said. "There will be a fair sea on all night. But how well she rides!"

"I love every beam and bolt of her." Shoulder to shoulder they bore forward to the companionway, and immediately the door banged after them.

Breitmann came out from behind the funnel and walked the deck for a time. He had studied the two from his shelter. What were they saying? Oh, Fitzgerald was clever and strong and good to look at, but— Breitmann straightened his arms before him, opened and shut his hands violently. Like that he would break him if he interfered with any of his desires. It would be fully twenty days before they made Ajaccio. Many things might happen before that time.

Two or three of the crew were lashing on the rail canvas, and the snap and flap of it jarred on Breitmann's nerves. For a week or more his nerves had been very close to the surface, so close that it had required all his will to keep his voice and hands from shaking. As he passed one of the sailors doffed his cap and bowed with great respect.

"That's not the admiral, Alphonse," whispered another of the crew, chuckling. "It's only his privit secretary."

"Ah, I haf meestake!" But Alphonse had made no mistake. He knew who it was. His mates did not see the smile of irony, of sly ridicule, which stirred his lips as he bowed to the passer. Immediately his rather handsome effeminate face resumed a stolid vacuity.

His name was not Alphonse. It was a captious offering by the crew, which on this yacht never went further than to tolerate the addition of a foreigner to their mess. He had signed a day or two before sailing. He had even begged for the honor to ship with Captain Flanagan, and he gave his name as Pierre Picard, to which he had no more right than to Alphonse. As Captain Flanagan was too good a sailor himself to draw distinctions, he was always glad to add a foreign tongue to his crew. You never could tell when its use might come in handy. That is why Pierre Picard was allowed to drink his soup in the fore-castle mess.

Breitmann continued on, oblivious to all things save his cogitations. He swung round the bridge. He believed that he and Cathewe could henceforth proceed on parallel lines, and there was much to be grateful for. Cathewe was quiet, but deep, and he, Breitmann, had knocked about among that sort and knew that they were to be respected. In all he had made only one serious blunder. He should never have permitted the vision of a face to deter him. He should have taken the things from the safe and vanished. It had not been a matter of compunction. And yet—ah, he was human, whatever his dream might be!

And he loved this beautiful American girl with all his heart and mind. It was not lawless love, but it was ruthless. When the time was ripe he would speak. Only a little while now to wait. The course had smoothed out; the sailing was easy. The man in the chimney no longer bothered him. Whoever and whatever he was, he had not shot his bolt soon enough.

Hildegarde von Mitter—was she to be the flaw in the chain? No, no; there should be no regret. He had steeled his heart against any such weakness. She had been necessary, and he would be a fool to pause over a bit of sentimentality. Her appearance had disorganized his nerves; that was all. Peering into his watch, he found that he had only half an hour before dinner. And it may be added that he dressed with singular care.

So did Fitzgerald, for that matter, and it took Cathewe just as long.

And this night Hildegarde von Mitter was meditating on the last throw for her hopes. She determined to cast once more the full sun of her beauty into the face of the man she loved, and if she failed to win the fault would not be hers.

Never again would the splendor of her beauty burn as it did this night.

Laura, alone among them all, went serenely about her toilet. She was young, and love had not yet spread its puzzle before her feet.

On the bridge the first officer was standing at the captain's side. "Captain," he shouted, "where did you get that Frenchman?"

"I picked him up day before yesterday. Speak fair English an' a bit o' dago. They're allus handy on a pleasure boat. He c'n keep off th' riffraff boatmen. An' you know what persistent cusses they be in the Mediterranean. Why?"

SOMETHING FOR NOTHING

Is the city of Sierra Madre going to insist upon a policy of getting something for nothing or are the voters willing to allow some remuneration for the services of the trustees who will serve the city after the coming election. At the instance of the Board of Trade the city trustees have ordered the proposition put on the ballot, giving the voters a chance to pass on the question of paying each trustee $10 monthly.

Citizens of Azusa will pass upon a similar proposition, and the question is also up for consideration in Monrovia. In practically all sixth class cities the necessity for remunerating the trustees for their services is recognized as the volume of business imposes increased burdens.

The Monrovia Messenger discusses the subject as follows:

The proposition to remunerate the city trustees for services rendered seems to have caused considerable interest to be taken in the matter, and while the major portion of the taxpayers are favorably inclined toward the movement a few others find in the venture some excuse to register a kick.

Why should men who have the burden of the city upon their shoulders be expected to supervise its affairs without pay?

From the city funds are paid salaries for labor that does not take one-half the time, to say nothing of the responsibility required from the trustees, and yet the payment of those bills is considered legitimate and just. Why, then, should the heads of a municipality, who labor for the best interests of the town, who are responsible for the splendid efficiency of the town, the well kept streets and a thousand other laudable measures, be obliged to give valuable time gratis to an unappreciative public?

There are no other persons on earth unless it be the country editor, who are so severely criticised, so entirely misunderstood, as the city trustees, and yet a selfish public, who believe in paying the city engineer whose services are needed when the laying of macadam streets is settled, the laborer who repairs the roads, the marshal who watches over the city that its citizens may be protected, raise strenuous objections when it comes to being separated from cold cash with which to award the city fathers who supply the brains through which every knotty municipal tangle is unraveled and every vexing and important problem is satisfactorily worked out.

If a man's service is of value to a city, then let that city pay for it, the same as any business house pays for its help. It's simply a business proposition, at best, and should, by all means, be placed upon a business basis.

Nursery Rhymes Up-to-Date

Hark, hark,
The dogs do bark,
The crooks are all over the town!
They're making grabs
From taxicabs,
And no one runs them down!

Diddle diddle dumpling,
My son John,
He came home, but His watch was gone!

Little Miss Muffet,
She sat on a tuffet,
Her diamonds made a display:
A pickpocket eyed her,
Then sat down beside her,
And got all her sparklers away!

Taffy is a burglar,
Taffy is a thief,
Taffy has a pull, though,
And never comes to grief.

Mary, Mary,
Quite contrary,
How do your valuables go?
Riffs and bangs
From hold-up gangs
I have the scars to show!

Little Cop Horner
He stood on the corner,
Watching the robbers go by;
He twiddled his thumb,
And he pulled in a bum,
And he said, "What a good cop am I!"

DANGER FOR YOUNGSTERS

Azuza Pomotrophic: Nothing is now needed more than an ordinance well enforced against the growing practice of boys hanging onto vehicles in the streets, thus endangering limb and life. We often see six or ten boys hanging onto vehicles, or trying to, and it is sure to result fatally soon if not stopped. Drivers are entitled to protection from the hordes of boys who run after and hang onto autos and wagons passing through the streets. Many auto drivers are reckless and deserve punishment, but they are not responsible for injuries to boys who catch their vehicles while on the streets. The city should enact an ordinance against this and see that it is enforced.

The practice spoken of by the Pomotrophic is altogether too common in Sierra Madre. There is already an ordinance in effect in Sierra Madre providing a penalty for "jumping" cars which is sadly in need of enforcement. Another abuse which ought to be corrected is that of bicycle riders who catch hold of autos or street cars to save pedalling. The latter practice is perhaps most dangerous of all, owing to the great speed reached and the fact that the rider has only one hand free to control his bicycle in case some small obstruction in the road or a sudden swerve in the course of the auto tends to throw him down.
